

DYIMON'S STORY

Dyimon was lured in by a monster who was posing as a man. He used the most common tactic to lure victims in the U.S.—the boyfriend tactic. He made her believe they were a couple in love, and Dyimon flew 2,000 miles to be with him. When she arrived, she was forced into the sex industry.

“During my time being trafficked, I was brutally beaten, starved, psychologically abused, and passed around as an object with no feelings.”

She was sexually exploited and trafficked for a year and three months before making it back home to her family. Now, she lives to tell the story of trafficking and is passionate about preventing it from happening to others. “My hope is that my fellow survivors and I can be the loudest voices in leading the way to end human trafficking, that we can start a powerful conversation and help educate people about the realities of trafficking.”
